

From railway to walkway

An old disused railway line has been converted into a walkway.
It is both an enjoyable amenity and an essential component linking a series of development operations.

THE CHOICE: in 1969, the SNCF line from the Bastille closed following the opening of the Regional Express Metro line A. The question arose of what to do with the long and narrow ribbon crossing the city along 4 km with a viaduct, an embankment, sections on street level, cuttings and tunnels. After studying the possibilities...

THE PRINCIPLES: in 1987, the City Council approved the project with the following aims:

- combining walkway development and viaduct renovation,
- improving the environment and developing links with adjoining neighbourhood.
